Risk Warning:

Please be aware that Tap does not work with any 3rd parties that offer Investment Services. If you have been asked to send assets to them, you should not do this.

We advise that you only send assets to wallets that you control personally.

There are a number of Scams in Europe at the moment that may be “too good to be true”.

We urge you to conduct your own due diligence before sending any Crypto out of your Tap Account and we urge you to only ever send it to a personal Wallet that you control, and not to any Wallet owned or controlled by someone else, this includes any “Investment Company or Brokers”.

If you have been asked to send your Crypto to any third party we urge you not to do this as we cannot validate who the ultimate controller of any Wallet is and cannot recover these transfers once sent. If you have any doubts you should withdraw your deposit back to your personal bank account.

Please be aware that once a transfer has been made on the blockchain, it is not possible to recall the funds, so it's essential to take extra precautions. We are also aware that there are scams operating in Europe at the moment that are depositing small amounts of Crypto to try and convince people that they are genuine, in an attempt to get people to send Crypto to them with the promise of a return. Once a transfer has been made on the blockchain, it is not possible to recall the funds, so it's essential to take extra precautions. If you have any concerns you can withdraw your funds back to your own bank account any time before this is spent.

We would like to take this opportunity to emphasise the potential dangers of scams, as they can be remarkably convincing, if it “sounds too good to be true” it could be some kind of scam. Many wallets do not require identification, making it impossible for us to confirm the legitimacy of the wallets or their owners. For your protection, we recommend against transferring funds to external wallets as we can only ensure the security of your assets held within Tap.
